SEA TURTLE SEASON IS HERE!

Humans aren't the only species that like to visit Miami Beach every year. From April to October, hundreds of endangered sea turtles come to our beautiful sandy beaches to hatch their little ones.

Sea turtle hatchlings are born with the instinct to head toward the brightest light on the beach after hatching, which is usually the light of the moon reflected off the ocean surf. In coastal areas with artificial lighting, hatchlings may become disoriented and travel in the wrong direction away from the ocean, potentially never making it to the water.

We all have a responsibility to keep them protected and to ensure their hatchlings make it home safely!
